

Morang

Saroj was born on January 9, 2005 in the village of Dungeunge, Nepal.

When he was only 6 years old, his mother died of health complications. His village is remote and isolated, so his family does not have immediate access to healthcare. His father remarried another woman. Unfortunately in Nepal, often times step-children are not given the same attention and love as biological children, and so Saroj was left without basic necessities like clothes or adequate food.

Saroj is from the same village as Reuben's parents. When Reuben would travel to visit his parents, and he always noticed how helpless this poor boy was. He knew something needed to change. If Saroj stayed in his home, Reuben knew he would end up on the streets or sold for trafficking. So Reuben brought Saroj to the orphanage.

Saroj is mature in understanding things. He listens carefully to what you are saying and responds. He is more than happy to help with chores around the orphanage. He cleans rooms, prepares food and sets the table. He loves to play soccer and watch cartoons.

Saroj has a piggy bank and when someone gives him money he puts it in piggy bank. Saroj loves buying things that are needed in kitchen. When there is shortage of things, he rushes to the little store nearby to buy it. He helps.

There is a deepness in him, and understanding beyond his age that could be noticed. And at the same time, he is joyful and exuberant, curious and friendly.

Thank you for your help for Saroj. The change and new direction for Saroj is night and day—and it couldn't be done without your support and generosity. Thank you!
